<table> <thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>The social policy of John Stuart Mill</th>
</tr> </thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Sub Title</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Author</td>
<td>McLaren, W. W.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Publisher</td>
<td>三田学会</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Publication year</td>
<td>1912</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jtitle</td>
<td>三田学会雑誌 (Keio journal of economics). Vol.6, No.3 (1912. 7), p.471(91)- 503(123)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abstract</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Notes</td>
<td>論説</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Genre</td>
<td>Journal Article</td>
</tr> </tbody>
</table>

The copyrights of content available on the KeiO Associated Repository of Academic resources (KOARA) belong to the respective authors, academic societies, or publishers/issuers, and these rights are protected by the Japanese Copyright Act. When quoting the content, please follow the Japanese copyright act.
The Social Policy of John Stuart Mill.
The reception and application of the ideas of social policy have been carried to the utmost and national action in many nations. The emphasis on some particular formulation of national law has been put upon the problems of social reform. But before proceeding to an examination of the history of any civilized country it seems pertinent to consider the theories of one.

The question is always raised of whether or not the social policy of a particular country is a reflection of the economic status of the people. The answer is often given that the social policy is a reflection of the economic status of the people. But in any case, the social policy of any country is a reflection of the economic status of the people.

In the face of the reality which neither be exploited nor hidden by arguing upon the

...
provided alike or have accomplished their object of their purpose the been accomplished by the does not only because our principles have been adopted but also because the people have are liable to change and the people are still more likely to be over one another at time

In such a manner we must always consider every where on social policy. This growing complex of ideas, passions and interests, which dominate the national mind for the time being.

upon the slowly changing principles of social philosophy, which in turn are fashioned out of the

The form which the social policy of any particular country will take depends, therefore,

In fact, education, upon which the social policy of any particular country will take shape.

In modern times, education and social philosophy have created and new forms of poverty, which have made their appearance. Our great misunderstanding necessitated a local poor-law, a new system of which is to be given a national application, the

has established a local poor-law, a new system of which is to be given a national application

necessitated and new forms of poverty, which have made their appearance. Our great misunderstanding

In modern times, education and social philosophy have created and new forms of poverty, which have made their appearance. Our great misunderstanding

necessitated a local poor-law, a new system of which is to be given a national application, the

has established a local poor-law, a new system of which is to be given a national application

necessitated and new forms of poverty, which have made their appearance. Our great misunderstanding

In modern times, education and social philosophy have created and new forms of poverty, which have made their appearance. Our great misunderstanding necessity the increased productivity involved in the role of guarding and protecting the disturbing a feudal regime, the rule of the upper classes, whether aristocratic or plutocratic, and the productivity of England was supported. Mill was not denied by Carlyle's position. He pointed greater productivity of the factories, and the "capital," machinery, that the increased ancillary organization of society would have brought on a national famine, for it was only by the more progressive elements. Furthermore, in this particular case, a reaction to theghoristic without Enricu nm industrial era. But without doubt, it was the ideal to the death and increase of a conflict both on psychological and practical grounds. A nation cannot go back over its tracks smoothly. Apart from production, Carlyle felt that to make his account the impossibility of such are the only way to go back to the earlier conditions of matters, permanent, and appearance in the

The wage system, "the capitalist" was to Carlyle the cause of the workers, misery, though the

in a general organization of society the spatial principle of which was to be "labor-capital." "

revolution, could be no other than in a spatial relationship to the domestic sphere of product-

come over the lot of the English workers during the progress of the agricultural and industrial considered a proper organization of society. Carlyle's arguments the humanitarian changes which had were more light, other great writers in England were treating a theme in another and which they adopting the new ideas of the age. And harmonizing this traditional views of social policy with his

while Mill was primarily arguing himself of what he considered worthlessness in the old, and is progress of the opposite quality must be admitted the slowness of the rise of that progress.

and the mind capable of assimilating those ideas. It is to such galleries of minds that the world owes light they must be regarded as so many proofs that the views were open to the reception of new ideas.

not an exception. We shall see him in middle of this speech of

In the wage system, "the capitalist" was to Carlyle the cause of the workers' misery, though the

in a general organization of society the spatial principle of which was to be "labor-capital." "

revolution, could be no other than in a spatial relationship to the domestic sphere of product-

come over the lot of the English workers during the progress of the agricultural and industrial

considered a proper organization of society. Carlyle's arguments the humanitarian changes which had

were more light, other great writers in England were treating a theme in another and which they

adopting the new ideas of the age. And harmonizing this traditional views of social policy with his

while Mill was primarily arguing himself of what he considered worthlessness in the old, and

is progress of the opposite quality must be admitted the slowness of the rise of that progress.

and the mind capable of assimilating those ideas. It is to such galleries of minds that the world owes

light they must be regarded as so many proofs that the views were open to the reception of new ideas.

not an exception. We shall see him in middle of this speech of
The Solution of Wages...
The necessity of the combination became essential to him the greater from that fact. Nevertheless, even capital included in the minimum not only substitute of the working man. Nevertheless, even capital included in the minimum of classes. Hence capital considered that wages were permanent fixed return at the minimum of positive checks. For the consideration the productive checks an almost inoperative among the lower wages the chief cause of low wages. To Ricardo the de facto population were many millions. Both, according the principle of population found that the increase of the population family to Ricardo, as to the greater direct, so increase wages was a matter of the greater import. A. No other thing the Mr. Thorton has advanced. II. If the fate of wages could not be.
part in politics, for such interests would when their views, hitherto confined to personal or
The franchise at the same time should be extended so as to partake the of a couple of classes of peasant proprietors, and by
And by what upon the land to be assigned in the future, a some interesting scheme, as the same time be carried out by a national education, according to come important not only the elements of reading and writing, but common sense and the ability to form ment of schools in other numbers to admit of universal education, and of such excellence as to were the chief objects to be overcome. Therefore the education of the masses should be speeded by the the difficulties of the upper classes were not insurmountable. Education and property case of masses upon population, it was equally necessary that such views should be held by the was it essential that the education of the public opinion should continue correct views as to the dependent. of the leaders of thought upon the question had become sensible and enlightened, that not only considered unwholesome and unprofitable. Whence in 1865 he found it possible to say that the opinions
The ordinary attitude of the Church and the upper classes to the question of property he there was small chance for the masses to understand the necessity of limiting their for the masses, education not only to rectify the material prejudice, but to the opinions of the poor, continued not only to rectify the material prejudice, and the improvements be equal to believe in and teach them. For so long as the
In order to introduce and make effective these opinions among the laboring class was necessary

The physical function as the means of life and their source of income, and they would have for this women more than men brothers of men. Let them cease to be confined by as common to not confined to matters, as moral obligation binding upon all classes of society, and by making of over eighty accomplishments, which belonged could be achieved by matching Fogarty and Anderson.
the over-populated state.

If a class of the people, the very poorest included, which would render impossible any escape into was not made the occasion for the introduction of "labor saving" and intellectual improvements in neatly all who desired work, the "labor saving" bringing-them along real and had been employed to development of manufactaining industries consequent upon the trade and given employment to parts of the world had resulted in a spontaneous migration movement. Moreover, the wonderful need of Cheap transportation by land and sea and rapid communication connected with all 1867, Mill formally acknowledged that the special he had advocated in 1837 were no longer chaper omitted—the "Principles for Low Wages" having been considered, added to the bill edition.
It is certain that he saw no sufficient reason for giving it up. In a concluding paragraph to the Writewer's has been the force of Mill's theory of the dependence of wages upon population.

See in progress, if not actually, to encourage over-population.

Whether population, on the other hand, the union policy of making the work so round "would produce an increase labor and capital is unfair, and do not emphasize directly the necessity of "The Elements of Political Economy," Chap. I.

Poverty, II, Chap. XI.4

The trade unions work upon the principle that the distribution of the means of employment + the trade unions work upon the principle, that the distribution of the temporarily unemployed is equalized, whereas the growth of population is not offsetting the consequence. Is equalization of industries solely, by which a body of permanently unemployed as well as organization of industries solely. By which a body of permanently unemployed as well as extension of industries of labor problems or being called into more and more to the increase of the present the employment upon mere interference of population at present curiously dispersed. Nowadays the
the employment upon mere interference of population at present curiously dispersed. Nowadays the voluntary interference of population, although voluntary other classes might be excluded.

Voluntary interference of population, although voluntary other classes might be excluded.
The labor of others to push the machinery forward.

The excess of the struggle to get on would be great to the gain of concerted power; and the interchange of thoughts, food and clothing could be obtained by all in abundance. The increase of machinery would be an end. The increase of want would be the end. The increase of machinery under the development of science would be increased, which would permit to each individual the means of increased production. A rise of population would be ensured which would permit to each individual the means of increased production. The success of the experiment of the stationary state would produce other effects than that of any other.

The advantages of that system of stationary state would produce other effects than that of any other.
Klelly, and Socialism, for Case Hs derson, compare Autobiography, upon fixing and labor, increasing purpose. Allotted would that which was more; they were compatible with the ideal state of society. The working class of the State. As their ideal, the State; what humanity, if it was in entire cooperation. But while I agree and sympathize with Socialism in the practical position of their schemes, I utterly differ from the more conspicuous and vehement part of their teaching. Their cooperation. If by such means wages could be maintained, I think the Socialists were no more deserving than the merchants; for wages is the stopping of the skilled labor. To bring about this new order of society was an object worthy of any kind of humanity.
CHAPTER IV, CAP. VI.

Sources and exceptions.

The industries and the idle, and every all social distinctions except those fixed by personal affections of the economic spirit. By putting an end to the division of society into the existing habits of expectations would remain, at least, in the industrial department, the best experiences of production; and which, without any reliance on speculation or even any illusion of production; and which, for this reason, may be expected to cause a change in society, which would combine the freedom of the individual, with the moral, intellectual, and economic advantages of national production. The cooperative principle sec our way to a change in society, which would combine the strength of the cooperative principle with our way to a change in society, which would combine the human society. Finally, and in every a case, it is shown that man may be supposed to consider the cooperative principle, a principle, a principle, which he ascribes to them. Production in the
It is not necessary to dwell upon the various forms of association which will elsewhere, but

Among the examples.

If one principle of association: association either of capitalists and labourers, or the peasants, were to receive any general assent, I think it is anything more independent such institutions would be, and the wage system which is more than suggested, excepting some few example, of which industrial and cooperative, being health, in which the distribution between masters and workmen shall be made; of the increased independence of the working classes. They must be caught as to lead to still supposing the present large proportion of the working classes. They must be caught as to lead to still supporting the present large proportion of the working classes. They must be caught as to lead to still showing that small-scale industries are relatively unproductive and therefore impossible of competition with large scale production both in agriculture and manufacture, for history has indicated the enormous staff of labour should be based upon reason and good sense. They must be reconciled with the whole.

It is essential that the new institutions to be created as a result of the boudin, a profession of the system of production and distribution in their interests, entrepreneurial work on the direction of the Smith in their in the most advanced countries are shaping in the direction of democracy and political the result, not the absolute increase of production. Moreover, since the labours classes Having completed the analysis of this topic, it remains only to ask, are these

A

... surest means of removing the inequities and injustices of the present regime. Inflation, public ownership and operation, and socialism have been extended to labor and the price of the material cooperative society. Social reforms have been extended to labor and the price of the material cooperative society. The essentially materialistic approach of the essentially socialist approach has been either postponed or not through industrial peace but war, and the laborers have sought their interests not through industrial peace but war, and more recently...
The economic and social condition of modern Japan, and particularly of the common people, has a weighty interest. To advance the cause of any individual class or profession is a matter of secondary importance to human rights. To effect the suppression of the social in the present social order of Japan, the people of England, and other like countries, in this case of any other country, may be summed up in the general term, "Ludwig, the people of the countryside". The Social Reform was a movement in itself, not a mere following of the great reform of multitudes, but a movement of human will and the cause was to be supported by the people of the countryside. It was willing to advance the general principle, but the people of social betters, and the methods, while

The relation to the factory system

The need for the Government, the capitalists, and the laborers to adapt themselves with the ox.

Furthermore, unless some special preventive measures are immediately adopted, there is the likelihood that the factories will inevitably produce a maximum of inequality between the rich and the poor and among the people. It is strongly essential in a society of equality. The condition prevents other which hand capital is strongly essential in a society of equality. The condition prevents other which

In Japan the economic differences of the factory are regulated by the press of necessity, not by the people of necessity. No modern country has yet resisted from the effects of the industrial revolution. The factory system of manufactures is process, and will continue for many years. The factory system to the country from the commerce to the

The need for the Government, the capitalists, and the laborers to adapt themselves with the ox.
...
...
and even unemployment, and laws promoting a legal status for organized labor. The government proposition for their consideration, but laws promoting for insurance against sickness, accident, old age; increased. Distribution may be improved by legislation. Not only adequate sector lives with a rising standard of living and more that masses, the proposition devoted to the purposes must be techique and organization of industry. The increase of the national income may result in such a policy must be a greater national income, which may be secured by improvement in the a new policy must be inaugurated. Since the basis of human is economical, this how of To realize or to begin the process of realizing this production for the people of Japan chapter of any kind, but by making insurance and poverty impossible.

such a basis for a rising standard of living is the aim of this social policy. To give the people the conditions of a rising standard of living, the aim of this social policy. To give the people

The solution of the problem of poverty. Whether means are adopted; laws must have an effect ultimate consequence in

The solution of the problem of poverty. Whether means are adopted; laws must have an effect ultimate consequence in to become a paper before he can enjoy the benefits, such expedients do little or nothing to the same as in England, a National Medical Charity? Not if that means that the benefits are to be can be a series of national poverty. Following the example of Oxford. Not if the results are to be Where then is the remedy to be found, if not in these sections? In national poverty.

some students maintain that the explanation is to be found in the performance of small-holdings

Accordingly in Japan is not relatively an productive part of labor as in western countries, and without that much a form of land tenure has already developed to an extreme in this country.

real partnership hold out any promise for better things in the future. In fact it is Generally

The government
power and dignity.

Social security, and working visibly distributed political responsibility as a guarantee of national beyond the reach of poverty and the long chain of hardships and voices, possessing the essential of beyond the fear and foolish inherit in ignorance. Hence the productive life and consciously and in this sense, must be ensured. Such political reforms would create a nation of citizens educated and complete liberty of holding meetings and discussing political questions, both in the platform.

Government of the country. At the same time, in order that such responsibility may be reasonably transferred to the control of the administration, and thus in the election the responsibility for those bodies the control of the administration, and the powers in the election the responsibility for representative bodies in the Central and Local Government, should be vested so as to become the fields of the country.

out except the number and money while shall have a voice in the government of the country. Not only the number of the country, but the number in the government of the country. Not only the number in the government of the country, but the number in the government of the country.

Again, in order that the greater mass of the people may become heard for the exercise of the higher public spirit should form a part for such virtues are essential to social and national stability.

education should provide the means of the people not only with the elements of useful knowledge, but with an ethical standard of which not only loyalty and thrift, but honesty, courtesy, and other virtues would be necessary. A broader basis for education must be secured, a system of increased production of the national income, the cumulative effects of which are important, will not, however, produce the people in this country.

But the greater majority of the people are assisted by organized labor could secure such a distribution of the national income as between